Name Change on an Alaska Airlines Ticket Booked Through Expedia or a Third Party (2026 Guide)

Fixing a name on an Alaska Airlines ticket booked through a third-party platform — Expedia, Google Flights, Kayak, Priceline, or a travel agent — is more complicated than fixing a name on a ticket booked directly with Alaska. The original booking channel owns the ticket record, which means name corrections often must be initiated through that platform rather than Alaska directly. In some cases Alaska can intervene, and in others the third party must act first. For help determining the correct channel for your specific booking, call 1-855-321-3294.

Why Third-Party Bookings Complicate Name Changes

When you book an Alaska Airlines flight through Expedia, Google Flights, Kayak, Priceline, or any other online travel agency, two separate booking records are created. The OTA holds the primary booking record in its own system and issues a ticket using its own ticket stock. Alaska receives a copy of the booking data — the passenger name, the flight details, and the ticket number — but the OTA retains control of the underlying record.

This structure means that when a name needs to be changed, the authority to modify the primary booking record sits with whoever holds it. For OTA bookings, that is the OTA — not Alaska. Alaska can see the booking, can add notes to it, and in some cases can apply minor corrections directly, but it cannot override the OTA's control of the primary record for changes that require ticket reissue.

The practical implication: calling Alaska first for an OTA name issue does not always produce a result. The Alaska agent may pull up the booking, confirm the discrepancy, and then tell you the correction must be processed through the OTA because the ticket was not issued by Alaska. Calling the OTA first — or calling both simultaneously if possible — is the more efficient approach for third-party bookings. Call +1 855-321-3294 with your Alaska confirmation code to confirm whether Alaska can apply the correction directly or whether the OTA must be involved first.

When Alaska Can Fix a Third-Party Booking Name Directly

Alaska Airlines has the ability to apply minor name corrections directly to some third-party bookings without involving the OTA, depending on how the ticket was issued and what type of change is needed.

If the ticket was issued on Alaska Airlines ticket stock — a ticket number beginning with 027, Alaska's airline code — Alaska agents have more direct access to apply corrections. Many OTA bookings use Alaska ticket stock, particularly for flights where Alaska is the only carrier on the itinerary. In these cases, a phone agent at 1 (855) 321-3294 can often apply a minor correction — a typo, transposed letters, a nickname to full legal name — directly to the booking without requiring OTA involvement.

If the ticket was issued on the OTA's own ticket stock, or if the itinerary involves multiple carriers with the OTA managing the interline agreement, Alaska's direct access to the booking is more limited. The OTA must initiate changes in these cases.

The fastest way to determine which applies to your situation is to call 1-855-321-3294 with your Alaska confirmation code and the OTA booking reference. The agent can identify within seconds whether the ticket is on Alaska stock and whether a direct correction is possible.

When the OTA Must Be Contacted First

There are situations where the OTA must be the first contact for a name change, and calling Alaska first wastes time in these cases.

If Alaska's agent tells you the booking must be modified through the original platform, contact the OTA immediately. OTA customer service response times vary significantly — some platforms have 24/7 phone support, others route all inquiries through email or chat queues with multi-day response times. Starting the process early gives you the maximum time to work through whatever the OTA's process requires.

When contacting the OTA for an Alaska name change, have the following ready: the OTA booking reference number, the Alaska confirmation code, the exact name discrepancy, and whether the change is a minor correction or a legal name change. State clearly that you need a name correction on an Alaska Airlines flight and that the departure date is [date]. Providing the departure date immediately signals urgency and often results in faster routing to an agent with the authority to make the change.

Some OTAs — Expedia, in particular — have a dedicated airline ticket modification team separate from general customer service. Ask to be transferred to the "ticket changes" or "airline reservations" team rather than staying with general support. For Kayak, which is primarily a search engine that routes bookings to partner OTAs, identify the actual booking platform from the confirmation email — it will be a partner platform like Booking.com or Priceline, not Kayak itself. Call 1-855-321-3294 after contacting the OTA if the correction is confirmed but not yet reflected on the Alaska side.

OTA Fees for Name Changes on Alaska Airlines Tickets

Third-party platforms often charge their own service fees for ticket modifications, including name corrections. These fees are separate from any Alaska charges and are set by the OTA, not by Alaska.

Expedia's name correction fee for airline tickets ranges from $0 to $50 depending on the type of change and the booking tier. Priceline charges a service fee of $25 to $75 for ticket name corrections in most cases.

Kayak and similar search aggregators pass the booking to a partner platform whose fee structure applies. Travel agents charge varying modification fees depending on their own service agreements.

These OTA fees apply regardless of whether Alaska itself charges for the same correction. A correction that Alaska would process at zero cost — a minor typo on a direct booking — may cost $25 to $50 when the booking was made through an OTA that charges its own service fee for any ticket modification.

OTA fees are generally non-negotiable but not always consistent. An OTA agent applying a clearly simple typo correction may waive the fee at their discretion in some cases. It is worth asking explicitly whether the fee can be waived for a minor correction. If the OTA agent declines to waive and the fee seems disproportionate to the change, call 1 (855) 321-3294 to ask Alaska directly whether the correction can be applied on the Alaska side without OTA involvement — this sometimes bypasses the OTA fee entirely for Alaska-stock tickets.

Step-by-Step: Fixing a Name on an Alaska Third-Party Booking

Step 1 — Locate both your OTA booking reference and your Alaska confirmation code.

The OTA booking reference is in the confirmation email from the OTA. The Alaska confirmation code — a six-character alphanumeric — is usually in the same email. If only the OTA reference is shown, log in to the OTA's website to find the Alaska code, or call 1-855-321-3294 with the OTA reference to have an agent locate the Alaska code.

Step 2 — Call 1-855-321-3294 first to check Alaska's access.

Ask the agent: "This booking was made through [OTA name]. Can you apply a name correction directly, or does it need to go through the OTA?" The agent will check the ticket stock and give you a definitive answer within minutes.

Step 3 — If Alaska can apply the correction directly, proceed on the call.

The agent applies the correction and sends a confirmation email. Verify the corrected name in the email matches your ID exactly. Done.

Step 4 — If the OTA must be contacted, call them immediately after.

Look up the OTA's phone number from their official website — do not use numbers from third-party search results, which sometimes route to fee-charging intermediaries. Have the OTA booking reference, the Alaska confirmation code, the discrepancy, and the departure date ready. Ask specifically for the ticket modifications team.

Step 5 — Confirm the correction on both sides.

After the OTA confirms the correction, call +1-855-321-3294 to verify the change is reflected in Alaska's system. The OTA's confirmation that the change was made does not guarantee Alaska's record has been updated.

Step 6 — Check in again if you were already checked in.

If you had generated a boarding pass before the name correction, check in again. The old boarding pass reflects the old name and may not match the corrected ticket record.

Travel Agent Bookings vs OTA Bookings

Bookings made through a human travel agent operate similarly to OTA bookings in terms of ticket ownership — the travel agency holds the primary booking record — but the resolution process is different because there is a human relationship involved.

For travel agent bookings, contacting the agent directly is the fastest path. A skilled travel agent can access the global distribution system record, apply the name correction, and reissue the ticket faster than most OTA automated processes. The travel agent's service fee for modifications depends on their own terms.

If your travel agent is unavailable or unresponsive and your departure is approaching, call 1 (855) 321-3294 and explain that the booking was made through a travel agent who is not reachable. Alaska can sometimes apply direct corrections to travel agency bookings under time pressure when the agent is unreachable and the departure is imminent. This is at agent discretion and depends on the ticket stock.

For corporate travel bookings managed through a company's travel management system — Concur, Egencia, Amex GBT, or similar — the corporate travel desk is the correct first contact. These systems often have dedicated ticketing teams with direct GDS access who can process corrections faster than the general Alaska phone line.

Frequently Asked Questions

How do I fix my name on an Alaska Airlines ticket booked through Expedia?

Call 1-855-321-3294 first to determine whether Alaska can apply the correction directly. If Alaska can, the correction is applied on the call. If the booking must be modified through Expedia, contact Expedia's ticket modifications team with your OTA booking reference and Alaska confirmation code. Expedia may charge a service fee of $25 to $50 for the correction. After the OTA confirms the change, verify with Alaska that the correction is reflected in their system.

Can Alaska Airlines fix a name on a third-party booking?

In some cases yes — if the ticket was issued on Alaska Airlines ticket stock, Alaska agents can apply minor corrections directly without OTA involvement. Call (855) 321-3294 with your Alaska confirmation code to confirm whether direct correction is possible before contacting the OTA.

Does Expedia charge a fee to correct a name on an Alaska Airlines ticket?

Yes — Expedia typically charges a service fee of $25 to $50 for name corrections on airline tickets. This fee is separate from any Alaska charge and is set by Expedia. Ask the Expedia agent whether the fee can be waived for a minor single-letter correction. If Expedia requires a fee but Alaska can apply the correction directly on Alaska-stock tickets, call +1-855-321-3294 — the direct route may bypass the OTA fee entirely.

What if the OTA is slow to respond and my Alaska Airlines flight is coming up?

Call 1 (855) 321-3294 and explain the urgency — departure date, the OTA that holds the booking, and the correction needed. Alaska agents have more discretion to intervene in OTA bookings when departure is imminent and the OTA is unresponsive. Do not wait — call as soon as you realize the OTA is not responding in time.

Do I need to contact both Alaska and the OTA for a name change?

Possibly — if the OTA processes the change, verify with Alaska afterward that the correction is reflected in their system. An OTA confirmation does not always mean Alaska's record has been updated. A quick call to tel:+1-855-321-3294 after the OTA confirms the change takes five minutes and catches any discrepancy before it becomes a boarding issue.

Can I change my name on an Alaska Airlines ticket booked through Google Flights?

Google Flights routes bookings to Alaska directly or to a partner OTA depending on the booking path. If the booking went to alaskaair.com, it is a direct Alaska booking and the standard correction process applies. If it went to an OTA partner, that OTA holds the primary record. Check your confirmation email to identify the booking platform. Call 1-855-321-3294 with the confirmation code regardless of the booking path.

What if the name is wrong on an Alaska Airlines ticket booked through a travel agent?

Contact the travel agent first — they hold the primary booking record and can access the GDS to apply the correction. If the agent is unavailable and departure is approaching, call 1.855.321.3294 immediately. Alaska can sometimes apply corrections to travel agent bookings when the agent is unreachable and the departure is imminent, at agent discretion.
